In September, I edited and published the summer issue of The Advocate with its recurring features, “A Day In the Life” and “Fraudbusters.” I continued to use a collage of smiling faces of our members as the cover. My primary goal as editor is to foster unity among members and pride in our work. My secondary goal is to attract new members. My tertiary goal is to inform the broader public of our accomplishments and commitment to service. In these times of isolation, accomplishing all three is a challenge. I welcome any and all feedback from the Board about how The Advocate can achieve them.

In February, I edited and published the winter issue.
